

Cistercian Historic Library, Zirc

[1]National Széchényi Library handles the library of the Cistercian Abbey built in the first half of the 18th century and moved into a new building in 1847.

The historic library can be found on the second floor of the Abbey building. The first books had been brought here by the monks of Heinrichau in the 18th century when they came and founded again the Cistercian Abbey. The number of books grew to over 60,000 volumes by 1950 when the Hungarian state took possession of the library following the dispersal of the monks of the Cistercian Order. Fortunately, National Széchényi Library was allotted the task of its maintaining and this task has been performed by NSZL ever since.

The collection comprises around 60,000 books and 15,000 volumes of periodicals, as well as several thousand posters and small prints. Cistercian Historic Library in Zirc owns 70 items of incunabula and approximately 400 antique documents, out of which several pieces are the only copies in Hungary. Themes of the stock range from theology via history to physics as well as a lot of other disciplines.
