“It is a mother-daughter story about how a parent becomes a grandparent, and how a child becomes a mother. What happens to us when we wake up one day and see that we have grown old in the eyes of society, but we do not feel it inside? Quoting Éva Pataki’s words: (…) » one grows old on the outside but there is an inner core, the I, roaming freely, regardless of one’s body. « From this show, we can learn to dare say if something has gone by; not to be afraid of new situations … and that one of the most important things in life is humor.” Ceremonial Hall

21.45–23.30 GÁBRIEL FARKAS [8]& HIS BAND [8]: Classics of Hungarian Popular Music

Throughout the night, you can listen to songs close to our hearts, performed by Gábriel and mixed with anecdotes. Gábriel Farkas and his jazz trio will select from popular cabaret pieces, dance songs and major hits of the period starting with the 1920s, via the 1950s, right until the 1980s. Most well-known melodies once sung by Éva Mikes, Ilona Hollós, Pál Szécsi, Zsuzsa Cserháti or Péter Máté will be performed in an unusual adaptation, since the songs of Hungarian popular music have not been played as jazz standard. The show is meant to entertain all generations, from grandparents to grandchildren.

A selection from television recordings:

Ezt a Nagy Szerelmet Tőled Kaptam Én [9] (I’ve got this big love from you)

Ott fogsz majd sírni [10] (You will cry there)
